Right Guide

This column is designated to give official VA answers to veterans' readjustment problems. Send questions to RIGHT GUIDE, 1380 Sepulveda Blvd., Los Angeles 25, California.

Most of the World War II veterans' benefit laws carry a deadline, or date, after which the benefits of the laws are denied unless extensions are made by act of Congress.

For example, the Servicemen's Readjustment Act (G.I. Bill) with its school, on-the-job training, readjustment allowance and loan benefits, sets time limits on its provisions. Veterans applying for compensation have a decided advantage in establishing service connection if application is made a year after separation from service. Veterans in order to secure terminal leave pay must apply before Sept. 1, 1947, and other laws carry similar deadlines.

Midnight, August 1, 1947, is the next deadline on certain valuable G.I. benefits. After that date some of the liberalized features of the amended National Service Life Insurance Act will cease to exist unless prolonged again by Congressional law.

1. Until that date veterans of World War II who have allowed their NSLI policies to lapse may reinstate upon a "comparative health" basis. This means that those who are able to sign the statement that they are in as good health now as at time of lapse need not take a physical examination. The whole transaction of reinstatement takes no more than 15 minutes' time if done on this basis.

Thousands of veterans in this area are physically fit and would experience no difficulty in passing the test normally required. However, even for these the mere signing of a comparative health statement is a great convenience and decided time saver.

But for hundreds of sick and disabled veterans Aug. 1, 1947, may be the last opportunity to ever again have any kind of insurance. Until that date, all that is required in addition to the payment of two premiums is a signed statement that they are in no worse physical condition than they were at the time of lapse. After that deadline, they will have to pass a physical examination — and for many of these that is impossible.

2. There are many widows, dependent parents, and children of deceased veterans throughout the area of the Los Angeles VA regional office who may be entitled to the proceeds of G.I. insurance held by their veteran relatives and they, the surviving dependents, are under the impression these policies lapsed before the death of the veteran.

The right to apply in cases more than one year old is cancelled Aug. 1, 1947. It is not the purpose of Right Guide to raise false hopes in the minds of surviving beneficiaries. They must establish the fact that the veteran's insurance was active at the time of disability or sickness was incurred. However, it may be to their interest and benefit to assemble all insurance receipts and relative papers and check with their nearest VA contact representative before Aug. 1, 1947, because after that date it may be too late.
